SC junks Shell's bid for P95-M tax refund

By Jeyarajaling

THE SOUTH AFRICAN REVENUE SERVICE (SARS) has rejected a bid by Shell to receive a P95-million tax refund. The bid, which was submitted in 2012, was for a refund of the company's 2011-12 tax liability. SARS said the bid was "unreasonable and unjustified" and that the company had not provided sufficient evidence to support its claim.

Shell's bid was based on a claim that the company had overpaid its tax in 2011-12. The company claimed that it had paid a total of P1.2 billion in tax, of which P95 million was overpaid. SARS, however, said that the company had only paid P1.1 billion in tax and that the remaining P100 million was not overpaid.

SARS also said that the company had not provided sufficient evidence to support its claim that it had overpaid its tax. The service said that the company had not provided any evidence to show that it had paid more than it was liable to pay.

Shell's bid was rejected by SARS on May 12, 2014. The company has the right to appeal the decision, but it has not yet done so.

There are a number of reasons why the use of the word "disability" is problematic. First, it is a stigmatizing label that is often used to describe people who are different from the majority. Second, it is a term that is often used to describe people who are unable to perform certain tasks, which is not always true. The authors conclude in the title that "Money, like sex, is not free." Money, like sex, is not free because it is not given away. It is earned, and it is used to buy things. The authors also conclude that "Money, like sex, is not free because it is not given away. It is earned, and it is used to buy things." This is a very interesting and thought-provoking article that challenges the common belief that money is a neutral tool. The authors argue that money is a social construct that is shaped by power and inequality. They suggest that the way money is used and distributed can have a significant impact on society. This article is a must-read for anyone interested in economics, sociology, or the role of money in our lives.

Autostada unveils the Ferrari FF

The Ultimate
Minibar on wheels

By [illegible]

Ferrari's new FF is a car that's as much a party as it is a machine. With its four doors, four seats, and a built-in minibar, it's the ultimate in automotive luxury. The FF is a true four-door sports car, with a sleek, aerodynamic design that's as functional as it is beautiful. It's a car that's built to be driven, not just to be seen. And it's a car that's built to be enjoyed, not just to be used. The FF is a car that's built to be a Ferrari.

What would drive?

Most people are about the drive, not the car. But what if you could have the best of both worlds? What if you could have a car that's built to be driven, not just to be seen? What if you could have a car that's built to be enjoyed, not just to be used? What if you could have a car that's built to be a Ferrari?

The diagram illustrates the experimental setup for measuring the rate of reaction. It features a reaction vessel with a stirrer and a thermometer, connected to a gas collection system. The gas syringe measures the volume of gas produced, which is collected in a water trough. A balance scale is used for weighing reactants, and a beaker holds the water trough.

There is a growing body of research that suggests that the use of technology in the classroom can enhance student learning and engagement. This research is based on the idea that technology can provide students with access to a wide range of resources and tools that can help them to learn more effectively. For example, students can use technology to access online resources, such as videos and interactive simulations, which can help them to understand complex concepts more easily. Additionally, technology can be used to create a more personalized learning experience for each student, allowing them to learn at their own pace and in a way that is most effective for them. This research also suggests that technology can be used to increase student motivation and engagement, as students are more likely to be interested in learning when they are using technology. Overall, the research suggests that technology can be a valuable tool for enhancing student learning and engagement in the classroom.

Zsa Zsa and Zia, dream team

By Bruce S. Kay

It's not often that two women can be so successful in the same industry, but Zsa Zsa and Zia are the exception. The two actresses, who have been friends since childhood, have teamed up to produce and star in the new comedy film "The Hot Chick" (R). The film, which is based on the novel by Rosalind Wiseman, is a hilarious look at the lives of two young women who are out to prove to their parents that they are not just "the hot chick" but also intelligent and capable. Zsa Zsa and Zia are both talented actresses, and their chemistry is perfect. The film is a must-see for anyone who loves a good comedy.
